Letter from the Chief Research Officer

Welcome to the second issue of the Fordham Research Newsletter. This newsletter marks the first full academic year since my appointment as Chief Research Officer.

It's been a very exciting year with a number of significant initiatives of which I am very proud. We have worked together in starting, sustaining and developing our Fordham research enterprise. In some cases, we have partnered with other universities in new ways, such as with the NYU and Columbia University research tours and the NYU-Fordham-Columbia Research Fellows program. Some of the other highlights of this issue include:

- Sponsored Research Day at Fordham
- Earth Month Research Colloquium

- Digital Humanities Symposium at NYU
- Interdisciplinary Awards recipients
- Grant awards listing over the previous 6 months

We hope that this newsletter will encourage and inspire all of Fordham's researchers, from undergraduates to seasoned scholars, to continue to delve deeper in your field of study. It is also our desire that researchers reach across their disciplines and partner in new ways with other scholars. I want to express my sincere appreciation to Provost Stephen Freedman and Dr. Jonathan Crystal, Associate Vice President, for their strong support and visionary guidance since my arrival last year to Fordham.

Our faculty and staff members deserve much credit for the accomplishments highlighted in this newsletter. I also want to thank the University Research Council, chaired by Dr. Jim Lewis, for their dedicated contributions to the University's research efforts. Together we continue to enhance the objectives of Fordham University's mission.

Please do not hesitate to reach out to me with your questions or concerns.

George Hong, Ph.D.

Associate Vice President for

Institutional Research Collaborations with Columbia University and New York University

Fordham University has developed its institutional research collaborations with NYU and Columbia through the following initiatives:

- ◆ Selected six Fordham-NYU and Columbia research fellows to develop joint research projects in the summer of 2017
- ◆ Sponsored the Earth Month Research Colloquium presented by the Executive Director of Columbia Earth Institute and co-sponsored NYU Digital Humanities Symposium
- ◆ Organized two research exploration tours at NYU and Columbia
- ◆ Co-sponsored the Ph.D. Colloquium on Business joined by NYU and Columbia Ph.D. students

Sponsored Research Day — A Smash!

On April 5 in Walsh Library on the Rose Hill campus, Fordham held its first ever Sponsored Research Day. The purpose of the event-filled day was to raise the visibility of the research enterprise at Fordham within the university.

In the morning, a Grant Writing Workshop was held to share ideas on both the pre and post-award phases of external grant writing. Kris Wolff and Beth Torres (Director and Grants Officer, respectively) in Fordham's Office of Sponsored Programs led the discussion.

At mid-day, another of the many firsts of this event took place – the presentations to the first-time winners of the Outstanding Externally Funded Research Awards. In his opening remarks, President Father McShane spoke of the need for wonder at the start of any research project as well as the ongoing cycle of discovery as the research advances. Provost Stephen Freedman introduced each winner and presented them with their award which included a check for $1,000.

Each of the awardees spoke of the great personal encouragement of being honored in this way as they accepted their award. They acknowledged their colleagues and students who had provided key support.

Father Joseph McShane gives opening remarks at Sponsored Research Day's awards presentation for the five Outstanding Externally Funded Research Awardees

The five 2017 Outstanding Externally Funded Research Awardees are:

Sciences	Silvia Finnemann	Professor, Biological Sciences
Social Sciences	Celia Fisher	Marie Ward Doty University Chair Professor in Ethics
Humanities	Stephen Grimm	Professor, Philosophy
Interdisciplinary Research	Jennifer Gordon	Professor, Law
Junior Faculty Research	Marc Conte	Assistant Professor, Economics

After the awards ceremony, Dr. Walter L. Goldschmidts, Vice President of the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory delivered the keynote speech of the day. He reflected on his impressive career in supporting and nurturing research that has developed in the laboratories he has directed. As an outcome of Dr. Goldschmidt's speech, Fordham hopes to develop an institutional research collaboration between Fordham and Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory.

Research Tour at NYU

On December 2, 2016 twenty-three Fordham guests were given a tour of a number of research facilities at NYU, and listened to related presentations including:

- Site visit and tour of NYU's Center for Neural Science
- A presentation by the Director of the Marron Institute of Urban Management
- Site visit and tour of NYU's Center for Genomics and Systems Biology
- A Presentation on Arts/ Humanities [Please see a related article on page 6 regarding NYU Digital Humanities Symposium which took place on April 28, 2017]

The Fordham group viewed a number of the NYU laboratories with researchers at work, many of whom took the time to explain their current projects and answer questions from the group.

As an example, the group received a presentation at the Center for Neural Science which began with a PowerPoint slide with two side-by-side views of the same New York City skyline – one image clearly focused (the Adult view) and the other a shadowy outline (the Infant view). The question posed was, “How does the adult view come about?” And so, this general scientific inquiry marks the starting point for one of the specific lines of research pursued at this Center.

This presentation was followed by a tour of the site's laboratories. This tour lends itself to establishing new institutional agreements for joint research. The selection of NYU-Fordham-Columbia research fellows is a good example of the deepening institutional connections with these fellow New York City research institutions. Fordham and Columbia faculty and administrators participating in the Research Tour at Columbia Earth Institute

Research Tour at Columbia University

On April 7, 2017 a similar research tour of the research facilities at Columbia University was held with seven Fordham faculty members selected for their research which was closely aligned with that of Columbia affiliated scholars. The tour included the following presentations:

- Center for Sustainable Urban Development (CSUD)
- Urban Design Lab (UDL)
- International Research Institute for Climate and Society (IRI)
- Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment (CCSI)
- Center for Climate Systems Research (CCSR)

- The Earth Institute Center for Environmental Sustainability (EICES)
- Center for Sustainable Development (CSD)

“Today’s research tour [at Columbia] will setup a critical foundation for our further institutional research collaboration.”

- Dr. George Hong

Tours of the Data Science Institute and the Columbia Interdisciplinary Northwest Corner Building took place at the start of the group’s visit. Dr. George Hong, Fordham’s CRO, addressed those gathered about Fordham University research enterprise and initiatives.

Earth Month Research Colloquium – Dr. Steve Cohen – April 19, 2017

Dr. Cohen’s talk was titled “Building Sustainable Cities and Living Sustainable Lifestyles.” With a very optimistic outlook, he explained that America is working to build sustainable cities and that people across the country are adopting more sustainable lifestyles.

Approximately 50 staff, faculty and students attended at McGinley Center at Rose Hill. In the question and answer period that followed, members of the audience asked for clarification on the futuristic trends which Dr. Cohen predicted in his talk.

Dr. George Hong, CRO, has expressed his desire to continue this expanded Earth Month format by again coming together with Fordham’s Bronx Science Consortium partners. In doing so, Fordham and the BSC will continue to celebrate the research and ideas which advance the health of the planet.

NYU Digital Humanities Symposium – Fordham Co-Sponsors – April 28, 2017

As part of NYU's Digital Humanities series, an all-day Symposium titled "Queer Encoding : Encoding Diverse Identities" took place on April 28, 2017 at the NYU Center for the Humanities in lower Manhattan.

The Fordham Digital Humanities Group and Office of Research partnered with NYU to support this event. Temple University also served as a partner.

In the afternoon "Project Hack" segment, Fordham's Katherine Briant and Stephen Powell presented a talk titled "Queerness of Space and Time and Text in the Independent Crusaders Mapping Project." In keeping with the theme of the event, Ms. Briant and Mr. Powell explained the digitation process in charting on a map of Europe the individual crusaders' travel patterns as they made their journeys to Jerusalem. Ms. Briant and Mr. Powell are pursuing their MA's in Medieval Studies / Interdisciplinary Studies.

Fordham-NYU-Columbia Fellows Selected for Summer 2017

A pair of new collaborations are starting this summer called the Fordham-NYU Research Fellows and the Fordham Research Fellows at Columbia. These exciting programs are designed to promote and expand research connections with Columbia and NYU.

Six distinguished Fordham faculty have been selected to partner with other NYU and Columbia researchers from May 15 to August 15 and to collaborate on a specific topic. In addition to the requirement of tangible outcomes from their work together, each Fordham Fellow will deliver a public presentation on their project in the Fall semester on a Fordham campus.

Research Computing Cluster (RCC) Awards ($14,000 in total)

In response to a series of high quality submissions, a faculty panel recommended eight Fordham faculty for the Pilot Cloud Based Research Computing Projects (PCBRCP) during summer 2017.

The projects will deal with both small and large (multi-terabyte) datasets that require up to 15,000 hours of CPU time on instances with 32-64 cores and total RAM of close to a terabyte. We congratulate these faculty and hope this computing power will serve their projects well.

Awardees	Project Description
Badr Albanna	Isolating meaningful cortical neural “code words” during behavior using a novel Information theoretic algorithm
Janet Freilich	Prophetic examples in patents
Marija Kundakovic	Epigenomic profiling of the human and mouse brain
Chaitra H. Nagaraja	An Instrumental Variable Approach to Generalizing Experimental Results
Cris Poor	Non-liftable Siegel modular forms in genus two
Amy K. Roy	Developmental examination of the intrinsic functional connectivity of emotion regulation circuits
Philip Shaw	Computing nonparametric marginal effects using parallel processing to identify the impact of land use characteristics on biomass reduction in Sumatra
David Swinarski	Nef divisors on moduli spaces of curves

Fordham Faculty Fellowships & Faculty Research Grants

The Office of Research facilitated the application, review and appeals process for the Faculty Fellowship. Eighty-eight (88) faculty members received these awards.

The OR in a similar way facilitated the application and review process for the Faculty Research Grant. Thirty-one (31) faculty received these awards.
